Denktash Says Partition Is Agreed

NICOSIA, Sept. 3 (NYT) .-Rauf Denktash the head of the Turkish Cypriot administration here, said today that Greece and Greek Cypriot government have privately conceded that the island will be formally divided into Greek Cypriot and Turkish Cypriot geographical zones. Mr. Denktash said that the Greek concession had been made in the last week during contacts between Greece and Turkey and between the two Cypriot administrations. The formal partitioning of the island has been Turkey's principal demand since its army invaded Cyprus on July The Turkish insistence on partition has been the major obstacle to a political solution of

Mr. Denktash's remarks today appeared to be the first firm indication that tangible progress was being made toward a political settlement

In his office here Mr. Denktash said he thought new negotiations could begin within two or three weeks. ATHENS, Sept. 3 (UPI).-Andreas Papandreou, former minister of economic cooperation, to-day announced the formation of a Socialist party, but said that elections could not be held before the government purged the state machinery and the army and punished those responsible for the military dictatorship that fell in July after a seven-year reign.

A Common Market spokesman 1 Brussels said yesterday that the Executive Commission of the EEC proposed a revival of Greece's connection through a new financial agreement to replace one signed in 1964, which called for the financing of industrial projects in Greece. Schmidt Sees Summit Of EEC States in 1974

BONN, Sept. 3.-West German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt said today that he was certain there would be some form of meeting of all Common Market leaders before the end of the year.

On his return from talks in Paris last night with President Valery Giscard d'Estaing, Mr. Schmidt told newsmen that neither the French President alone nor the French and West German leaders together could decide on a European Economic Community summit, He added: "I am certain that [Common Market members] in Government spokesman Armin Omenewald said that the talks had centered on the European and the impact of increased oil prices on industrial countries. Mr. Gruenewald described the meeting as cordial, but he refused to disclose details, saying both sides had agreed on the confidential nature of the talks. Mr. Schmidt last night said that the talks had been excellent, a description taken as an indication that he and the French leader had agreed on initial moves to push the nine members of the Common Market toward their declared goal of political union by 1980. Mr. Giscard d'Estaing, who last week called for a Common Market summit conference on European unity, is understood to have drawn up a list of general principles on the course that the community should take. The Paris talks, announced only a day after Mr. Schmidt pledged $2 billion for Italy's economy, came against a background of raging inflation and deepening gloom over business and employment prospects in the next 12 months. German sources in Paris said that Mr. Schmidt was especially anxious to know what Mr. Giscard d'Estaing had in mind when he told a French television audience last week of new initiatives he intended to take in the Common Market. Both Mr. Giscard d'Estaing and Mr. Schmidt believe that one of the keys to closer political cooperation is greater collaboration on the economic front to fight inflation. This implies more harmonization of economic policies.

Both men have also stressed the perils faced by the Continent if Europeans do not tackle their problems together.

French sources pointed to one new element of French thinking that could help to promote closer cooperation. This is the softening of traditional French nostility to the ceding of some sovereign powers to supranational institutions.

Godson Drowned, Crewman Missing

Heath's Yacht Is Lost in Storm on Channel

Minister Edward Heath was wrecked off the south coast of England last night in violent storms that devastated shipping in the English Channel.

By midday, searchers had recovered the body of one missing crewman, identified by the police as Mr. Heath's 23-year-old godson, Christopher Chadd, Another crew member was missing and presumed drowned. The five other members of the seven-man crew were hauled ashore at Brighton after drifting for eight hours on a life raft. Mr. Heath himself was not aboard.

The yacht, a 45-foot sloop named Morning Cloud, capsized in a Force-10 gale late last night be-fore the crew could send out an SOS or set off emergency flares The Dorset coast in southwest Eugland was littered with the debris of craft swept ashore. Hundreds of trees and chimners were blown down by winds reaching 80 miles an hour. Lost Grain Belt

The Greek administration estimates that the Turkish Cypriots, who make up 18 per cent of the population, new control about two-thirds of the island's wealth, an estimate that is considered high, but not ridiculously so, by impartial economic experts. The Greek Cypriots have now lost, perhaps permanently, the lemon groves that gave the country substantial export inme, plus half of the grain belt that feeds the island, and the richest port, Famagusta. Still, there is no food shortage now.

Greeks also controlled the nowvanished tourist trade, which brought in more foreign exchange than the citrus crop.

Turkish Cypriot officials min-imize the disruption caused by the invasion and the subsequent flight from Turkish areas of some 150,000 Greeks, but there seems little question that, for a while at least, the Turks have captured more of the economy than they can handle.

Economists point out, however. that substantial economic wealth remains in the hands of the Greek Cypriot population. This includes the ports of Limassol and Larnaca, the only two electricity-generating systems on the bright, D-Ark, today opened island and the only petroleum talks with Chinese leaders on the refinery, the fruit orchards, vinefirst full day of its 13-day China yards and wineries of the south,

British Spending

Two bases held by Britain as a guarantor of the 1960 treaty that gave Cyprus independence are also in the Greek part of the island. The British have about 20,000 people in Cyprus, including dependents, and spend about $60 million a year here.

Because of the dislocation of so many people, unemployment, usually 1 to 2 per cent of the labor force, is expected to rise to as much as 10 per cent. Bank re--considered adequate at about $300 million, or enough to pay for imports for eight months -are declining, but not alarming-

Many Cypriot officials and businessmen agree that the immediate future of the island's economy is bleak, at best. They say that thousands of Greek Cypriots will slip below the level of middle-class living they achieved in the last decade or so, while Turkish Cypriots strive to rise from relatively meaner conditions. There is a general acknowledgement, however, that only a renewal of warfare will make this country a permanent disaster area.

Eight passenger aircraft are shuttling them and two troop transport ships capable of carrying almost 5,000 men are in the harbor.

The Portuguese have agreed to remove all the troops by Oct. 30, but sources here say that they could complete the evacuation by mid-September.

Although rebel soldiers are not in evidence here. Africans wearing shirts and dresses decorated with the independence movement's slogans and pictures of its founder are often seen on the streets and in the markets mixing with Portuguese soldiers. The soldiers now thronging the city are usually in camouflage uniforms and often can be seen purchasing souvenirs, suitcases, bottles of whisky and ice-cream

A young officer commented: "I am glad to be leaving, of course, but I would like to visit within a few years. Many of us have much respect for the guerrilla leadership and we expect that they will succeed." Two African workmen on the waterfront shrugged and simply smiled politely when asked about the Portuguese withdrawal. One suggested that despite the 13 years of guerrilla war, "things just moved too quickly at the end to keep up with them,"

Slogans in support of the independence movement have been pasted on hotel walls, fences and public buildings.

But so far, the guerrilles have not come into the city in force. Guerrilla sources say that the independence party will move into Bissau between now and Tuesday. The sources said that the two sisin guerrillas carried explosives and a list containing the names of 20 fellow guerrillas held in Israeli jails, an indication that they planned to take civilian hostages and demand the release of their comrades.

Prelate Charged Meanwhile, in Jerusalem, state attorney Gabriel Bach filed formai charges against Greek Catholic Archbishop Hilsrion Capucci, accusing the prelate of snuggling arms from Lebanon to guarrillas in Israel on three separate occasions.

The charges said that the 52-year-old archbishop began working for the guerrillas in April after neeting with two Pales-tinian leaders in Beirut. The two leaders were identified as Abu Jihad an assistant to el-Fatah leade- Yazzir Arafat and chief of the Black September organization, and Abu Firas, a director of Fatah activities on the Israeli-occupied West Bank of Jordan.

The charges said weapons and explosives that Archbishop Capucci carried in his limousine from Betrut to Jerusalem in April reached the guerrillas and were used in attacks in the Jerusalem area.

Reluctant on Formal Request

India Said to Privately Urge U.S. to Offer Emergency Food

By Bernard Weinraub

Indian officials reportedly are privately asking the United States for emergency shipments of food.

Although a series of requests has been made in New Delhi and Washington, Prime Minister Indira Gandhi, by all accounts, has been reluctant to ask formally for s.food deal or s "soft" loan from the United States, Instead, Indian officials are urging the United States to offer help to In-

The delicacy of the current talks has stirred confusion among Indian officials because the New Delhi government has privately asked for help but, at the same time, has publicly denied doing so. It is known, however, that the Indian Embassy in Washington has asked the United States for a million tons of food on concessional terms

The U.S. Embassy here has told the State Department in recent ks that the food situation in India, a nation of 580 million, had become "desperate." The embassy said that widespread hunger and even famine threatened the nation. The key reasons for the food crisis here are a poor monsoon season, expected to seriously damage the autumn crop, and the fourfold increase in oil prices by Arab countries, which has led to critical shortages of fertilizer.

"With oil at a decent price, India would have enough tilizer and it would not have been in this critical situation." an agricultural expert said yes-

Last autumn's crop totaled 67 million tons of food grain. This autumn's crop is expected to total 60 to 64 million tons. In the year, India's population has increased by 13 million.

Some experts predict that overall production in the 1974-75 agricultural year, ending next June, is likely to reach 108 million tons, or 10 million tons below the government's target. India's decision to turn to the United States for concess food touches raw nerves here. The government has been reluctant to ask for help because it would revive the specter of India leaning on the United States after having proclaimed selfreliance as a fundamental and realistic goal

Both Indian and U.S. sources my that Indian government officials have been hoping that the United States would offer help, without Mrs. Gandhi's making a plea to Washington. Relations between India and the United States have been strained in recent years, although U.S. officials here say that the links are U.S. officials declined to speculate on when President Ford will nominate an ambassador to East Germany. the form of a free grant or a "soft" loan; to be repaid over 20 years or by another type of payment on easy terms. Although Washington probably would send some concessional food to India, U.S. officials here have insisted that there was no possibility that the United States would pour grain into this im-poverished nation as it did in the 1950s and 1960s. The world food shortage, coupled with U.S.

U. S. assistance to India to-taled $10 billion from 1950 to 1971, the largest amount of aid given to any country. The aid included 50 million tons of emergency food, largely sent in the 1960s to avert famine. Many Indians now assert that the aid was patronizing.

Americans say that, in retro-spect, the influx of U.S. ald often failed to heed India's sensitivities, but that the assistance warded off mass starvation, especially in northeast India.

ROME, Sept. 3 - (NYT) -A scarcity of pasta, caused by gov-ernment attempts at controlling the price of the national staple food, is angering housewives throughout Italy just as many families have returned from their vacations and are bracing themselves for what threatens to be a difficult autumn and winter.

25 Million Workers Protected

New U.S. Pension Act Hailed as Milestone

WASHINGTON, Sept. 3 (NYT). —The pension reform act signed by President Ford yesterday has been halled as one of the most beneficial measures ever enacted for U.S. working men and wom-

The bill is designed to protect the retirement benefits of some million workers from the bankruptcies of employers and from looting by union officials.

I. W. Abel, president of the United Steelworkers of America, said the act "means that all wage-earners who are covered by private pension plans will no longer have to live with the nightmare that they will work lifetime for a pension they might not receive." Bernard Nash, executive director of the American Association of Retired Persons, said the act represents the greatest single achievement since the enactment of Social Security" for the betterment of the American worker. The sponsors said the act would help to correct many abuses and deficiences in the nation's 300,000 corporate and private benefit plans, programs that have assets of about $200 billion. However,

As a result of court decisions, the airlines have dropped their ban on married stewardesses and stopped firing flight attendants when they reach a certain age.

In the past most airlines firen stewardesses after they reached age 32.

Only five years ago, the average flight attendant's career lasted 18 months. Retirement plans, company-paid life insur-ance and related career benefits were virtually nonexistent, Ms. Rueck said.

Today's average flight attendant, however, has been on the job for nearly six years. Four out of 10 are married. Many have children, and nearly 5 per

Two recent court decisions have broken legal ground for stew-ardesses. A federal judge in Los Angeles ruled Ang. 6 that Contimental Airlines must rehire 34 stewardesses whom it had fired because they weighed more than the airline said they should.

And a judge in Washington ruled last April in a civil soit that Northwest Orient had discriminated against its stewardesses by treating them differently from male stewards.

widowers, of a worker who had built up pension rights must receive at least half of the employee's pension payments. The law tightens the standards for corporate and union contributions to a pension plan making them independent of the pros-perity of the company itself and actuarily sound. The act liberalizes the amounts of tax-deferred money that selfemployed persons may set aside in their personal retirement plans. It also allows workers whose companies do not have pension plans to set up personal retire-ment programs of their own and awards them certain tax credits.

Vesting .

The most complicated provision in the 248-page act concerns "vesting," the term applied to the set of conditions, such as length of service and age that gives a worker a nonforfeitable right to a pension before retirement. Employers with pension plans have three vesting options: • Under the gradual vesting option, each participant is vested for at least 25 per cent of his accrued benefit from the employer's contributions after five years of service, plus an addi-tional 5 per cent more for each of the next five years of service, and 10 percent more for each succeeding year. Under this option, then, a worker would be entitled to 100 per cent of his pension rights after 15 years. • A second option provides employees with 100 per cent vest-ing-full pension rights—after not more than 10 years' service.

 Under an option called the Rule of 45, a worker is entitled to at least 50 per cent vesting when the sum of his years of service and age total 45. Vesting would increase by 10 per cent for each additional year. The rule of 45 applies only after an initial five-year period of ser-vice, but full vesting is assured after 15 years of employment

Eligibility

Workers have the right to be admitted to a plan when they either reach the age of 25 or have one year of service, whichever is later. Credit of up to three years is allowed for service before the age of 25 once the worker qualifies for participation.

Financing

A major aim of the act is to force companies to make contributions to their pension plans in an orderly way by setting aside enough money to cover liabilities for both current payments and the accrual of past credits toward pensions. estimated one-third of all pension funds cannot now meet their financial obligations.

Companies or unions in arrears on their pension fund payments may have as much es 40 years to catch up on their payments. Companies or unions not complywith the pension funding

> > Blacks Do Better

When the test is administered to racially mixed groups, according to Prof. Williams, the results form "a bimodal curve," which means that almost all blacks do better than almost all whites.

He said the test was "designed to serve as a moderator variable to validate or invalidate low IQ scores." What he is saying is that a child from the black ghetto can score poorly on a standardized IQ test without necessarily being stupid.

For example, if a child makes a high score on the BITCH test, Prof Williams assumes at least average intelligence, no matter what the child's standardized IQ score may be. The major shortcoming of the BITCH test seems to be that it tells nothing about the testtaker's ability to conceptualize, or to reason, or to interpret words or other symbols. It may, unless it is administered orally, provide some small indication of reading ability.

But it is almost totally a vocabulary test, and a test in ghetto slang vocabulary, at that, Mr. Williams said that a person who scores well on the test has demonstrated his ability to cope in one environment and. by extension, shows that he can learn and cope in any environment. Who Makes Up Word

Prof. Williams, incidentally, bristles at the word "slang." "Jump sharp,"—to dress attracively — "deuce-and-a-quarter," — a Buick Electra 225—and tively "T.C.B."-to take care of business, meaning specifically to make love, but also to do anyslang expressions, be said, but merely aspects of communication in the black culture. Slang, on the other hand, is a white put-down of black communicative expressions, he said. If a black person makes up a word-uptight, for intance-it is deemed to be slang. If a white person makes up a word—astronaut, for example—it becomes an entry in the next dic-

The suspicion persists that the BITCH test is a child of whimsy or that it at least was conceived that way. When Prof. Williams first came up with the idea, back in 1970, BITCL stood for "Black Intelligence Test Counterbalanced for Honkies."

But when he revised it in 1972, he changed the name. He said it is doing very nicely these days.

The District of Columbia public school system, whose children have not fared well of late on standardized tests, has ordered a batch of BITCH tests Clearly some local officials take it seriously. So, apparently, does the Association of Black Psychologists, which last week gave Mr. Williams its "distin-guished psychologist" award. Prof. Williams is a founder of

U.S. School Rolls At 4-Year Low

WASHINGTON, Sept. 3 (AP). -Enrollments in the nation's schools and colleges will drop to a four-year low this fall, but the costs of education are expected to reach a record $108 billion, the government says. U.S. Education Commissioner

Terrel Bell has reported that the 1974-75 enrollment would drop by seven-tenths of one per cent below the previous year, continuing a trend begun in 1971. He said that 58.6 million students would go to schools and colleges this fall.

Despite that drop, Mr. Bell said, education expenditures are expected to rise by $11 billion, or about 11 per cent, over last year's

Leaping Over the Wall

The exchange of ambassadors between East Germany and the United States is, at present, largely a symbolic act. But that it is of practical significance was demonstrated when Washington delayed the business because of East German harassment of traffic leading into West Berlin. The opening of embassies by the two countries is an acceptance of a very curious state of affairs. an armistice arrangement that has become a peace without treaty; a temporary modus vivendi that has hardened into a degree of permanence by, as much as anything, the mere passage of time. It is a pragmatic act of stratecraft that, in effect, signals the recognition of an initial absence of statecraft.

A divided Germany does not make a great deal of sense, historically, ethnically, economically or geographically. Much of 19th century Europe revolved around the creation of a united Germany by iron and blood, as well as the exertion of cultural force. Two world wars made the rest of Europe wonder whether it could live with such a Germany at its heart. But in theory, at least, all the victorious Allies in 1945 accepted the eventual reconstitution of some kind of single Germany, and the occupation zones were supposed to be simply preliminary to an eventual peace conference and all-embracing treaty, in the manner of the diplomacy that followed World War L Where the Allles openly differed was just what kind of Germany would evolve; where they may have been in secret agreement-largely unspoken - was that both East and West would have been uncomfortable with any kind of united Germany.

The result was the two Germanys, with an isolated West Berlin as a perennial point of friction. And as each Germany attained its own form of economic and political stability, with its own ties to East or West, it became increasingly clear that no present union between them could be accomplished without a major tragedy for the Germans. for Europe and for the world. Even the Germans, as Willy Brandt's Ostpolitik demonstrated, realized this and most of them have decided to live with their divisions.

It is far from an ideal compromise. The pull of West Germany on the Eastern Germans caused the Berlin wall to go up. and the exchange of cultural and ideological pressures between the two Germanys can be expected to continue old tensions, despite new accommodations. But it is a compromise, and one that is better adapted to today's needs in Germany and the world than a dogmatic insistence on a unity that . very few would want to fight to the death for now. So long as the division of Germany does exist, it is better to reduce its hatred and confusion, its risks and costs. Time has produced many differences in form and in substance between the two Germanys; time can ameliorate them. The wall still exists. but the powers and the Germans can paraphrase the psalmist and say that with the help of common sense they have leaped

Cutting Back on Oil

The world, it appears, must learn to live with very high oil prices for a while longer. From last winter until last month the United States had hoped to push world prices down enough to ease the industrial countries' troubles with inflation and their balances of payments. Those hopes reached a crest in July when the Secretary of the Treasury, William Simon, visited Saudi Arabia and the Saudis promised to auction off a huge volume of oil. The effect would have been to depress prices. Hope wavered and then rapidly fell in the following weeks, for the auction never took place Although it is hard to know precisely what is going on within the councils of the Saudi monarchy. it seems evident that Sheikh Yamani and the policy of lower prices have been definitely overruled in favor of Arab brotherhood, high prices and production cutbacks. It becomes necessary for Americans to think a little harder about the possibility that we may have to pay more. for a longer time, than we had supposed. The question is how.

That question was put to President Ford

last week at his press conference. His response: "Short-term action by consumer nations and the long-term actions under Project Independence." It is the short-term remedy that is most interesting at the moment. The history of international cooperation among the oil-consuming nations has not been terribly encouraging, but there are some recent signs that sheer necessity is finally coercing these governments into a cautious and tentative progress. More than a year ago, the oil-burning countries began to discuss a common response to disruptions in the flow. The talks had got nowhere by November, when the Arab embargoes went into effect. When the United States called the energy conference here last February. the most memorable result was the flat refusal of the French government to participate in any common action whatever. But the Energy Coordinating Group established by the other governments at that February conference has been ticking along with periodic meetings in Brussels. It was the ECG and the Brussels meetings that Mr. Ford had in mind when he spoke of "shortterm action by consumer nations."

At its next meeting, on Sept. 18, the ECG is to take up a draft agreement on sharing equally a reduction of imports in the event of another oil embargo or disruption. Next, and more important, comes the possibility of joint plans for reducing worldwide oil consumption If the industrial countries cannot sustain the present level of oil purchases without jeopardizing their own economies and the world monetary system, they need an orderly program for scaling down the amounts that they import.

The Under Secretary of the Treasury. Jack Bennett, has adopted the laudable practice-perilons to him, but valuable to the rest of us-of discussing unpleasant truths candidly in public. Higher prices have already reversed the pattern of oil consumption in the United States. Instead of growing steadily and rapidly, over the past year, consumption has actually fallen a little. But perhaps it needs to fall further.

Perhaps we are still importing more oil than is prudent, for reasons of economic security and stability. If the country decides to apply a serious brake to its oil imports, Mr. Bennett suggests that hypothetically one method might be a stiff import fee. There is currently a fee but, at 15.5 cents on a barrel worth $10 or more, it is hardly significant. Mr. Bennett suggests that, simply as one theoretical possibility, it might be made severely more significant. He was simply showing the other players around the table one of the cards that the United States holds in its hand without indicating when, if ever, it might be used.

Wouldn't a really stiff import fee make our oil prices go higher than ever for consumers? Certainly. But, as Mr. Bennett correctly observes, it is a matter of weighing that impact against the very considerable harm that the present hemorrhage of foreign exchange is already inflicting on us. Unfortunately, a good many senior members of Congress, particularly among the Democrats, have committed themselves to the idea that low oil and gasoline prices are to be equated with virtue, and any increases will be not only damaging but wicked. They need to reflect upon the logic that lower prices mean greater consumption, which means higher imports, which in turn means more dependence upon foreign producers and specifically Saudi Arabia. As Mr. Bennett puts it, the issue is whether the country wants to remain crucially dependent upon an oil supply that is sometimes insecure and always exceedingly costly.

The time may come, within the next few months, when the country has to decide quickly how to cut down its use of oil. The best answer might be an increase in gasoline prices beyond the rise of 26 cents a gallon over the past year, and beyond the rise of 10 cents a gallon in the federal tax that President Ford says is no longer under discussion. If a further increase in gasoline taxes eventually becomes necessary as a conservative measure, then it ought to be combined with cuts in other taxes—partly in simple fairness to the taxpayer, partly to keep the new burden from tipping the economy deeper into recession. One possibility is to cut the federal payroll tax by the same amount that the gasoline tax goes up. The payroll tax is harshly regressive and a particular burden to the poor. By simultaneously lowering that tax rate and increasing the gasoline taxes, the government could put more money in the consumer's pocket while discouraging him from spending it on gaso-

It may be necessary for all of us, in the national interest, to undergo a further wrench away from our accustomed habitswrench away from consumption, toward conservation. Sharp increases in the gasoline taxes may prove a very useful instrument, if accompanied by a balancing reduction in other levies. Reducing our oil imports is the only really useful response to the present prices and the producers' threats to raise them further.

President Ford's Inherited Diplomats

By James Reston

BRUSSELS-President Ford has not had time to look over the U.S. ambassadors he inherited from the Nixon administration in Europe, but a strong case could probably be made for reappraisal and change.

The diplomatic problem in this part of the world is only one of the many hangovers of Watergate. Not in all cases, but in many ambassadorships were bartered for campaign contributions, and for months during the Watergate crisis decisions on ap-pointing or replacing ambassadors were long delayed.

For example, the Moscow post was vacant for many months during a critical period in U.S.-Soviet relations. Also, Walter Annenberg, the U.S. ambassador in London, has been asking for a replacement now ever since the beginning of this year, but no decision has been made, though Britain is now going through the most acute economic crisis since

Of the 20 U.S. diplomatic missions in the West, including Canada, 15 are headed by Nixon political appointees and five are professional foreign service officers. All seven of the diplomatic posts in the Communist countries of the Soviet Union and Eastern Europe are filled by career offi-

The United States is well represented in some of these missions. It has effective political ambassadors at NATO, Donald Rumsfeld, a former Illinois congressman, and in Dublin, John Moore of New Jersey. And it has strong professionals in West Germany, Martin Hillenbrand; in Turkey, William Macomber fr.; and in Moscow, Walter Stoessel.

Elsewhere on the Continent the missions are not as influential as they might be and have not adapted to the new leaders and governments in this part of the world.

Aware of Problem

Secretary of State Kissinger has been aware of this problem for some time, but under President Nixon he was not able to make all the changes he wanted, either in the State Department or in the embassies. For example, he wanted to bring David Rockefeller, president of the Chase Manhattan Bank, into one of the top posts in the State Department, but this was vetoed by the White House, Incidentally, the key economic est at the State Department has been vacant for months at a time when economic questions are vital to the conduct of American foreign policy.

After Sen. J. William Pulbright was defeated this summer in the Arkansas primary election, Mr. Kissinger talked to him about taking a diplomatic post, This idea is now likely to be raised again before Sen Fulbright comes to the end of his term at the turn of the year. Meanwhile. another veteran of the Senate, John Sherman Cooper of Ken-tucky, former U.S. ambassador to India, has been chosen to head the U.S. mission in East Germany, when it is finally estab-

Much will depend in the diplomatic fields as in other fields. however, on whether President Ford decides that he wants to give the impression of continuity or change. He has already improved the tone of his administration by his own open friendess, but he has kept Mr. Nixon's chief of staff in the White House, Gen. Alexander Haig, and he asked all cabinet officers to stay at their posts at least for the time being.

The men who planned the transition for Mr. Ford, including Ambassador Rumsfeld here, urged more and faster change, both in Washington and in the

Sweep Urged

Even one member of the Cabinet, though he wanted to stay on his job, felt that it was in Mr. Ford's and the country's best interests to sweep out the entire Nixon Cabinet, except Mr. Kissinger, so as to have his own men and give the impression of a new beginning. President Johnson testified at the end of his political career that one of his greatest regrets was that he had relied primarily on President Kennedy's men, rather than his many changes before the election or the start of the new year. He wanted to avoid calling for everybody's resignation, as Mr. Nixon did at the end of his first term-a move much criticized at the time-but the new President's freedom of action will undoubtedly decline if he waits too long.

He is in an ideal position to put his own teams in place both at home and abroad. Outstanding men and women who did not want to join the Nixon administration during the Watergate crisis are available to Mr. Ford

In fact it is hard to imagine anyhody of either party who would not respond to his call for help. Also, unlike Mr. Nixon, he has no promises to keep, no big political contributors to reward with cabinet posts or em-

This is one of the advantages of coming to the presidency by nomination through the 25th Amendment rather than by election. It is a rare opportunity to make objective decisions and put together a ministry of talents chosen for ability and experience

Obviously, changing things now would add a great deal to Mr. Ford's burdens. "The easy way." as Mr. Nixon used to say, is to go on as before, counting on men who siready know their way around. But in the embassies in Europe and in some cabinet posts, this may not be the best Way. Chancellor Schmidt of West

Germany was making a point in Bonn the other day that the industrial nations had to work out their inflation problems together and do so urgently, and he emphasized that this would require day-to-day consultation. In recent years, the level of consultation with the ambassadors in Washington, London, Paris, Moscow and Tokyo has declined. Only the Soviet amassador in Washington, Anatoly Dobrynin, has been in day-today contact with Mr. Kissinger. But he has in the process dem-onstrated how important embassies can be when the right men are appointed to the critical fine Christian statesman, President Ford, to see how his religious beliefs can accommodate themselves to any ethical stance. Near the start of the month of August, while in New Orleans, he proposed that he could not tolerate an "unconditional blanket amnesty" to the pleasure of the veterans assembled to hear him. Now he is President. He appears to be changing, just a bit. Now he will extend an amnesty, but it will be defined in a most curious way. Rather than being a total act of forgiveness or remission of punishment on his part towards those who protested against the war in Vietnam because it was unjust harrid and demeaning of civilized values, he has extended some type of work program, which requires the recipient only to come before a draft board. or the like, and ask them, or tell them, about his own errors as a draft defector, and they, in turn, will accept the defector's protestations, giving him some sort of two year purgatorial task to work towards the remission of his act of conscience. The Turkish government may not have been originally re-sponsible for the latest Oyprus tragedy; but if it continues its priate times.

foolish course it will have itself to blame for the even greater tragedy that is certain to follow. Before Turkish soldiers had completed occupying the 40 per cent of the island's territory they now hold, their leaders in Ankars talked and behaved as if there had been no change in govern-ment in either Athens or Nicosia. Yet Archbishop Makarios, the Greek junts that opposed him, and the thug Nikos Sampson have been replaced by Constantine Caramanlis and Glafkos Clerides, both reasonable men.

However, Ankara seems determined to impose a solution distateful to the new Greek leaders and those they represent. It is reasonable to expect the Greeks to pay some price for the damage done by the discredited junts. But if the Greek people are forced to swallow the unacceptable, the moderate men in Athens and Nicosia may be undermined. The call for Enosis will have been strengthened, and EOKA-B, the Greek Cypriot guerrilla organization, will be certain to resume full-scale terrorist Turkish Cypriot indignation would be justified without question. Yet what ought to be is not necessarily what will be, and that is what Ankara should consider. Turkey does not need its own Northern Ireland. The best way to avoid-that is to give Messrs. Caramanlis and Clerides something they can take back to their constituents.

Moral Pariahs?

It's a difficult life for sensitive Americans nowadays. On the one hand, we see the need for a foreign policy aimed at containing the Communists, who, in spite of Nixon's "breakthroughs," seem just as aggressive as ever. But we are deeply ashamed of such excesses of anti-Communism as our government's seven-year sunport of the Greek junta and (presumably) the overthrow of the legitimate government in Chile, etc., etc.

Not only are such excesses morally repugnant the more so because the United States is supposed to be the bulwark of freeiom, but they frequently backfire, as witness the recent demonstrations in Athens and the withdrawal of Greek forces from NATO. Some of us are fed up with being the moral parishs of the world, especially when it doesn't seem to do much good. Would someone please boot out those idiots in the Pentagon and the State Department (yes, you too, Mr. Kissinger) who have brought us to this pass?

Chile's Junta Hints It May Release Some

By Joseph Novitski

SANTIAGO, Sept. 3 (WP) .-Gen. Augusto Pinochet, president of the Chilean military junta and chief of state, has hinted openly that his government is considering freeing some of the estimated 6,000 men and women detained in Chile for political reasons.

The indication was contained in a conciliatory answer Sunday to last week's plea by four reli-gious leaders for an end to some of the repressive measures in effect for almost one year, since the military overthrew President Salvador Allende.

Gen. Pinochet's answer to the leaders of Chile's Roman Catholics, Methodists, Lutherans and Jews was published Sunday on the front page of the government-owned newspaper, La Pa-

Several well-placed sources concerned with the rights of prisoners in Chile, sources in and outside the government, have been reporting that the military junta was considering freeing and deporting some of the bestknown supporters of the late President Allende.

"I believe it is necessary to remind you that, moved by the sincere spirit of justice and the profound desire of the government over which I preside to bring peace to all Chileans, and on its own initiative, a study of concrete measures that could by the juridical norms governing the emergency we are living through, has been ordered," Gen. Grotesque situation follows grotesque situation as the fetishist parades about with his doll, taking it to wardrobe fittings, introducing it to his astonished wife and weekending with it at his mother's seaside home to find that his mother prefers the mute rubber creature to her flesh-andblood daughter-in-law. As the course of true love never runs smooth, this macabre idyll rises to an excited climax when the doll is kidnapped to become the plaything of a colony of Spanish wetbacks. The conclusion is a surprise that you must experience for yourself. The misogyny of this movie runs pretty high at times, but Berlanga's deft direction and Michel Piccoli's doubleedged performance keep it from

"Contes Immoraux" of the Polish director Walerian Borowczyk (at the Vendôme and the Eyséesincoln) is a curious quartet of scabrous aketches, all of them tressing the perverse. In the first, boy meets girl on the Norman seadliffs at high tide. The second exposes an 1890 miss who experiences her sexual awakening when she is locked up in a cucumber storeroom. During her her imprisonment she comes mon some musty pornographic books and a photo of the Comedie-Française idol, Mounet-Sully, The third episode tells of the Countess Bathory of 17th-century Hungary who liked to bathe in the blood of peasant wenches and who undertook expeditions in the countryside to secure her prey. Paloma Picasso, the daughter of the late painter, impersonates the dreaded noblewoman. The last sketch has to do with the incestuous orgies of the Borgias with Pope Alexander VI and his family mumbling Italian and with Savonarola preaching in French. Borowczyk has some interesting ideas and a sound sense of pictorial composition, but his new film. despite its unifying general notion, is extremely uneven. It is not that its varying passages fail to match—this is unnecessary but each playlet is marred by dull stretches. The result is a disconcerting jumble of striking flashes nterrupted by theatrical static.

have two examples of this on Paris screens

"Les Guichets du Louvre (at the Gaumont-Opera and the Concorde), the police roundup of Jews for deportation in 1942 Paris has been restaged with a ghastly and gripping realism. Newsreel footage has been used for the background for a story about a young student from the provinces who tries to warn prospective victims from returning to their homes during the raid. His good intentions, he finds, are suspect, but he does rescue, at least temporarily, one hounded girl. There have been complaints that the picturing of the base behavior of immune citizens during the terrible persecution is too harsh, but far more ignoble incidents might be cited. The comportment of people when the knife is at another's throat is not a pretty sight.

There is stark power to Michel Mitrani's evocation of the terrorridden scene and to the episode of pursuit and panic, these done in the documentary manner, and contrasted sardonically with a view of the German author, Ernst Junger, a member of the occupying Nazi Army, jotting notes in his comfortable study. The highpressured tempo is sustained almost throughout, though the fin-

"Executive Action" (at the Ermitage in English) also takes historic fact as its premise, using the assessination of President Kennedy as the springboard from which it negotiates some startling somersaults

Based on a novel by Mark Lane and David Freed, it supposes that there was an intricate conspiracy behind the crime, one organized by a band of ruthless capitalists enraged over the President's announced intentions to withdraw U.S. troops from Vietnam. Oswald, it further supposes, was not the killer or one of the killers, but had a double. This guessing game seems on a constant retreat from the probable as it is acted out with Burt Lancaster and Robert Byan cast as the chief operators of the dastardly doings, frantically telephoning each other orders and reports. Newsreel excerpts have been included, but instead of adding an air of authenticity they tend to contradict the extravagant suppositions set before us.

A Film of Brucknerian Size

By Henry Pleasants

ONDON, Sept. 3 (IHT).—Hans Christian Fischer has seized upon the opportunity offered by the 150th anniversary of the birth of Anton Bruckner (Sept. 4, 1824) to add a Bruckner film documentary, "The Life of Anton Bruckner," to his previous docu mentaries on the lives of Mozart and Beethoven. He was present for its world premiere at the Queen Elizabeth Hall last night, the climax of the South Bank's annual season of opera and music films. Fischer's earlier films have had a notable success on the South Bank, with no less than 30 showings at the Royal Festival and Queen Elizabeth Halls, always to good houses. There is no reason to believe that the new Bruckner film will not be fully as popular, with the composer more in vogue now than at any time since his death in every person, every place, every building and every thing that Bruckner met, saw, lived m, or touched in the 72 years of his life, too much of it in microscopic close-up. The narration (there are both German and is str forward and factual, if rather tediously over-awed. The music, too, is illustrated with filmed performances of substantial extracts from his major works by an imposing array of orchestras and choral societies under eminent conductors, among them Eugen Jochum Rudolf Kempe, Rafael Kubelik and Karl Böhm. The quality of the recording is excellent, the camera work restless.

It is, then, a film of Bruckner-ian dimensions, and of Bruck-nerian pace and solemnity, without a hurried step, and certainly without a smile, in the 135 min-utes of its running time. A bit too worshipful in its approach perhaps, it is still accurate and informative, and the scenes of with color pictures of just about Vienna and the Upper Austrian countryside are ravishing. One can only hope that Ken Russell will accept it as definitive and keep his hands off Bruckner.

The Hostility

My only complaint would be that the coverage of the hostility Bruckner encountered in Vienna slights the essential background of the pro and anti-Wagner passions that made Vienna a bloody musical battleground in the years that Bruckner taught and toiled at the conservatory and the university. Not all the viciousness came from the anti-Wagnerians.

Bruckner, a Wagnerian with classical leanings, was caught in the middle. With no gifts or accomplishments either as a social nimal or musical politician, he had a rough time of it until as the film correctly shows, a younger generation of pro-Wag-nerian conductors and critics, many of them former students of Bruckner, took up his cause and turned the tide in the last decade of his life.

Celebrating Goethe's 225th

By Paul Moor

Allied psychologists came to academies in Heidelberg, Göt-postwar Germany in 1945 to try tingen, and East Berlin have comprehend the calamity which had happened and relate it will see the decorously jubilant to Germany's future, they took publication of their eighth vol-heart to some extent when their time. The 15 men and women questionnaires showed that the working full time on this project, great majority of Germans undaunted by 3,260,000 quotation regarded Johann Wolfgang von Goethe as their nation's greatest son. Little wonder that the city of Frankfurt, the great writer's birtiplace, will continue to cele-brate his 235th birthday (Aug. 28) for four months.

As in all such cases, the vener ation of a great German from the past has once again taken on some overtones of East-West rivalry, with partisan hints as to which part of Germany today really deserves the great man's noble heritage. West Germany has Frankfurt and the house (rebuilt, actually, after 1945) where Goethe, the only child of a rich but bourgeois family, spent. his early years. East Germany has Weimar and all sorts of memorabilis from the period when the court of the enlightened Karl Angust, duke of Saxe-Weimar, attracted not only Goethe but also other titans of the day, including Friedrich Schiller, Johann Cottifried Herder and others and all that in a town with a population at that time of 6,000 inhab-

West's Celebrations

West Germany's celebrations have, aside from a few sour notes and complaints, scarcely cast a giance eastward. The complaints arose, for instance, from East German authorities refusal to permit the cultural expert of the Social Democrats' Born parliamentary faction to attend the Weimar celebration or to let in a West German television crew to shoot location material in Weimar. East Germany's observances of the birthday have emphasised Goethe's quite genuine concern for the toiling proletariat of his time (he called them the class "which certainly for God is the highest") and his political activity during his first 10 years in Weimar.

The world today remembers Goethe primarily as the author of "Faust," a literary and philosophical masterpiece on which he worked and tinkered for 60 years before he finally abandoned it to the world. Relatively few people know that scholars accept as fact that one Dr. Georg Paust did exist, a native of the Wurttemberg village of Knittlingen, born in 1480, who studied medicine, astrology and alchemy in Wittenberg. Eriurt and Involstadt and Nuremberg, first traces of what became the Faust legend. The first such publication appeared in 1587: "The Story of Dr. Johann Faust," one of the Volksbücher of that era which appeared in hig, chesp editions and sometimes, as in this case, became wildly popular best sellers.

First Translations

1592, one of them in English, which paved the way for the first Faust drama, Christopher Mar-lowe's 'Tragicall Historie of the Horrible Life and Death of Dr. Faustus," printed in 1604 but performed from 1594 on. Strolling Elizabethan players, who had meanwhile turned in into a comedy or even a farce, performed it on the Continent, including Germany, where marionette theaters helped themselves to the visitors' repertury. Goethe, in his autobiography "Writing and Truth," records that he first saw such a performance as a child in Frankfurt.

His 225th birthday has brought attention to one example of that staggeringly detailed scholarship for which perhaps Germans alone have a taste: a truly monumental STOCKHOLM (IHT) -- A 188sonably close inspection of the Stockholmia 74 International Stamp Exhibition, open Sept. 21-29, will involve a walk of at least three miles, provided that corners are cut wisely and well.

Philatelists from more than 100 countries will show their collections in 4,500 frames, each more than a yard wide, spaced out on the 215,280 square feet of floor space in the St. Erik Ex-hibition Halls in Alvsjö, south of central Stockholm. Each frame holds between 12 and 16 normal album pages and the total number of postage stamps to be on display is anyone's astronomical

The giant postage stamp show, commemorating both the founding of the Universal Postal Union in 1874 and the UPU congress in Stockholm in 1924, has been arranged by the Swedish Philatelic Society and the Swedish General Post Office under the auspices of the Fédération Internationale de Philatélie (FIP). High patron of the event is Sweden's King Carl XVI Gustaf. Exhibiting by special invitation will be, among others, Queen Elizabeth II of Britain.

The United States Post Office, not to be outdone by European royalty, will show a "moon letter," postmarked on the moon, in the noncompetitive "official class," where postal administrations in countries will display their

The competitive class includes 3,500 frames from private collectors in Europe, Africa, Asia, the Americas and Australia, Sections are set aside for national special subjects ranging from "pre-philately" to "aerophilately." The latter class contains sections "balloon mail," mail" and "helicopter mail."

"The aim of the exhibition is to stimulate international interest in a most exciting hobby, especially among the younger generation," commented Per Pasg, head of the postage stamp division of the Swedish General Post Office. "Junior collectors, in the 15-to-21 age group, are exempted from the regular 30-crowns-a-frame entry fee. We've allotted them some 500 frames over more than 43,000 square feet."

$850-Million Algerian Gas Factory Set

Output From Plant To Go to Europe

ALGIERS, Sept. 3 (Reuters) .-An international consortium yesterday signed an $850-million contract with Algeria's state-run company Sonatrach for the construction of a huge liquefied natural gas factory, the Algerian news agency reported.

The consortium, led by the Belgian firm Sybetra, includes the companies Mannesmann of West Germany, Creusot-Loire of France, Voest-Alpine of Austria, Chemical Construction Corp. of the United States, and Traction et Electricité of Belgium.

The liquefied gas will be mostly for the European market, and will be sold in the framework of a contract signed between Sonatrach and a consortium of European companies.

The factory, to be built at Arzew, western Algeria, will produce 15.5 billion cubic meters of liquefied natural gas annually. It will be the most important of its kind in the world, according to the Algerian news agency, and will employ about 800 people.

The gas will be transported from the Algerian port of Bethious, near Arzew, to Fos-sur-Mer, France, and Montefalcone, Italy. The new factory will bring the capacity of production of the

VW Undecided on U.S. Plant

The board of directors of Volkswagenwerke is still undecided about whether to build an assembly plant in the United States. The question was discussed at a board meeting Monday and it was decided that additional study is needed on the profitability of such an operation. VW sources estimate that such a project could cost the company about $1 billion. They say that a decision on whether or not to proceed with the project is unlikely to be taken this year.

Preussag Turnover Up 25.5 Per Cent Preussag consolidated sales in the first six months rose 25.5 per cent to 1.28 billion deutsche marks from the year-earlier period. The diversified West German industrial company said profit in the second quarter exceeded that of the first, but it did not give any figures. Preussag, which has interests in energy, metals, transport and construction, says higher prices for metals and oil helped second-quarter profit. But it adds that the coal and building sectors of its business did not fare well.

VIENNA, Sept. 3 (AP).—The world's major oil-producing countries are likely to agree on moderate cuts in output later this month in an effort to keep up prices that are under pressure from a growing surplus of oil, well informed sources said here today. They said experts of the Organization of Petroleum Export-ing Countries (OPEC) who wound up a five-day meeting here yesterday recommended the cutbacks to balance worldwide supply and demand.

recommendation goes before OPEC's ministerial conference scheduled to take place here in Sept. 12. OPEC headquarters did not comment on the organization's future price policy pending a decision by the ministers. But it was understood that, in the face of the current oil produc-tion surplus, price boosts for the last quarter of this year could be virtually ruled out.

The average price for crude oil from Arab countries, following an almost four-fold increase during 1973, is at present $11.65 a barrel. That price was "frozen" in January this year and has not been changed since.

New York leads every other state in international trade. We're the bank that knows New York State.

United States' foreign trade three customs districts; the Port of New York, and Buffalo and Ogdensburg on the St. Lawrence Seaway.

bank that knows New York, has in the nation. been a part of New York's importance as an international marketplace since 1839. Today, we can help you become part of retailers. Because we know banking locations than any other bank in the state. In fact, with resources exceeding $13 billion, Marine Midland is the Marine Midland Bank, the twelfth largest banking system

> So, we can put you in touch with suppliers, manufacturers, distributors, them. And our knowledge can be yours.

That invaluable knowledge, plus our years of experience and our senior officers' desire to get involved, is fully expressed in our international banking capabilities. Marine Midland Bank, Big bank resources. Personal service. All over New York State.

Knowing New York State makes all the difference in the world.

European Markets

When you know how we became a major international bank, our name will no longer puzzle you.

Today, Chemical Bank is one of the world's leading financial institutions. We do business with over 80% of the world's companies that have over $2 billion in annual sales. Our world-wide services are so extensive that no matter what business your company is in, we can provide the banking support you need. But 150 years ago we weren't even a bank. We were the New York Chemical Manufacturing Company located in a rural area of Manhattan known as Greenwich Village.

Chemical Bank's past,

Long before we became known as a businessman's bank, we were a businessman's business. We were founded by a local paint manufacturer, a druggist, and a prosperous New York grocer. In 1824 we applied to the legislature for permission to operate as a bank. Later that year a bank charter was granted. Since then a lot of things have changed. For one thing we no longer manufacture chemicals. And for another we no longer require our cashiers to live above the counting room "the better to guard the bank's funds."

Chemical Bank's present.

In 1917 we ranked 129th among U.S. banks. Today, we're number six and still growing. In the last year we've opened new offices in Beirut, Chicago, Milan, Jakarta, Singapore and the Channel Islands. Right now, we're supplying businessmen with financial energy to meet the changing demands of today's business world. With everything from product and project financing in the developing markets of the Far and the Middle East to specially designed programs involving leasing, commercial financing and factoring.

Chemical Bank's future.

As new markets develop, we'll play an even greater role as an international bank. By increasing. our strength in all of the world's major markets and by offering an even wider range of financial services. In Europe and around the world.

Chemical Bank world-wide.

Main Office: New York. In today's turbulent stock and money markets you need the services of somebody who really knows the ropes

Merrill Lynch

The world's money and stock markets aren't getting easier — they're getting more difficult. In these turbulent times you need more and better information and more and better expertise to stay ahead of today's rapid changes. Whatever kind of business you do with Merrill Lynch the combined resources of this leading financial institution are designed to give you sharper insights and broader long-term views, better service and speedier action. Merrill Lynch is wherever you are.

Securities Brokerage

Merrill Lynch has long been one of the world's largest securities brokers, with more than one and a half million accounts, private or institutional, worldwide. On average it takes part in one in every eight round-lot transactions on the New York Stock Exchange. Back-up facilities include the largest private computer installation in New York and a globegirdling communication network. Your account executive has direct access to in-depth research which regularly covers over 1,000 stocks.

Commodities

Merrill Lynch is the largest commodities futures broker, in terms of dollar volume of brokerage transactions executed both in the US and worldwide. Merrill Lynch is a member of all major commodities exchanges in the United States and all over the world. Merrill Lynch handles future contracts in more than 40 different commodities.

Investment Banking

In 1973 the Merrill Lynch group of companies led the investment banking industry, having managed or co-managed over $15,000 million of financing, including $1,000 million of international financing, $7,700 million of public corporate financing in the US, $5,500 million of public US Government, Government agency and municipal financing in the US, and $730 million of private financing in the US—including $400 million of real estate financing.

The corporate finance teams of Mertill Lynch can focus their strengths throughout the world on your financing requirements.

Investment Counselling and Economic Consulting

Through its subsidiaries, Lionel D. Edie and Co. Inc., and Lionel D. Edie International, Merrill Lynch is also a leader in the area of investment counselling and economic consulting. The name of Edie has long been associated with the concept of independent and thorough research. This research is carried on in New York and Geneva. In the US alone Edie employs one of the largest forces of economics professionals of any non-governmental organisation. Edie is qualified to manage investments as well as provide economic services. Edie can monitor trends in all countries which offer investments of potential international appeal.

MERRILL LYNCH INTERNATIONAL INCORPORATED

Amsterdam, Athens, Barcelona, Beirut, Brussels, Cannes, Dubai, Dusseldorf, Frankfurt, Geneva, Hamburg, Hong Kong, Kuwait, London, Lugano, Madrid, Manila, Milan, Munich, Paris, Rome, Rotterdam, Singapore, Taipei, Tokyo, Vienna, Zurich.

Services related to research and transmission and execution of orders discussed in this advertisement are provided by Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner & Smith Inc., New York, and certain of its affiliates, and are available outside the US and Canada through Merrill Lynch International Incorporated and its subsidiaries and associated companies.

TATLIN! Six Stories

By Guy Davenport, Illustrated. Scribners. 261 pp. $7

Reviewed by Hilton Kramer

GUY Davenport is one of our most gifted and versatile men of letters—critic, poet, classicist, translator, teacher and book il-lustrator—and in "Tatlini" his first work of fiction, he has written a most unusual book. To say that it consists of six short stories is technically correct but. as we shall see, a little mis-

In the era of Borges, Barthelme, et al, one would be bard-pressed, of course, to say exactly what a short story is and what it is not. But even by today's liberated standards, Mr. Davenport's conception of the short-story form is remarkable. He has given it some of the in-tellectual density of the learned essay, some of the lyric concision of the modern poem—some of its difficulty too—and a structure that often resembles a film documentary. The result is a tour de force that adds some-thing new to the art of fiction.

All of these stories deal with historical figures or events and will therefore mean a good deal more to readers equipped with the necessary historical, lin-guistic and philosophical back-ground than to common con-sumers of the short story. The title piece is about the life and work of Vladimir Tatlin, the Russian constructivist sculptor who flourished in the early days of the Soviet avant-garde and then went down in defeat in the dark days of the Stalinist terror. This story, a kind of literary collage of historical and fictional episodes, contains some of Mr. Davenport's most beautiful writing—writing that is both vividly pictorial and coolly discursive. For anyone already acquainted with the vicissitudes of Tatlin's career, it is extremely moving, but I imagine it would be something of a bafflement to a reader who is not familiar, say, with Camilla Gray's "The Great Ex-periment: Russian Art 1863-1922," which Mr. Davenport acknowledges as a source of informs-

The longest of these stories, "The Dawn in Erewhon," recounts the intellectual and erotic adventures of the contemporary Dutch philosopher Adriaan van Hovendaal. According to the author's note, parts of the story are actually excerpts, translated from the Dutch, of Van Hovendaal's philosophical writings on the utopian theories of Samuel Butler and Charles Fourier. It, too, is a literary college in which philosophical rumination alternates with scenes of what can After South bid hearts and West overcalled in clubs, the raise to two hearts did not guarantee four-card support. Rather than jump precipitately to game South should have made a cue-bid of three clubs. North would have bid three spades, showing strength in that suit, and three no-trump from South would have closed the auction.

West had a difficult choice of lead. A trump lead was clearly undesirable, but all the other suits came into consideration. He chose to lead dummy's diamond suit, but instead of making the normal lead of the three he tried the effect of the eight. The intention was to make South think that the lead was the top of a worthless holding, perhaps a singleton, and the plan succeeded.

By running the lead around to his hand and then leading trumps, South could have emerged with 11 tricks, losing one trump trick and one club. But he proceeded on the assumption that West had made a normal lead, in which case the diamond king was anteed to be with East.

South therefore put up th mond ace, and things wen bad to worse for him. N led a heart to the ten, los the jack West returned the spad-

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 3 (UPI) Ed Goodson and Chris Spelen hit two-run homers in the sixth inning and pitcher Jim Barr added a solo shot in the seventh as the San Francisco Giants beat the Los Angeles Dodgers, 5-3, last Goodson, Speier and Barr all connected off Dodger starter and loser Andy Messersmith, 16-6, as Los Angeles dropped its third game in its last four, but kept its 3 1/2-game lead over Cincinnati in the National League West. The Reds lost to the Houston Astros.

Barr allowed seven hits in snapping a personal three-game losing streak and gaining his 11th victory against eight losses as the Giants beat Los Angeles for the first time in their last nine games.

The Dodgers, who blew an 8-1 lead in losing to the Giants in a Labor Day game last year, took a 3-0 lead through the first rive innings. But Messersmith could not hold it.

He had the Giants shut out on four hits until Gary Matthews got on base with a two-out infield single in the sixth. Goodson followed with his fifth home run and after Daye Kingman singled, Speier hit his eighth homer.

Fractured Leg Finishes Racing Of Little Current

NEW YORK, Sept. 3 (NYT).— Little Current, the Darby Dan Farm's colt who won this year's Preskness and Belmont Stakes, fractured his right ankle during the running of the Lawrence Realization on Saturday and was retired from competition yesterday. His trainer, Lou Roudinello, made the announcement after consultation with John Galbreath, the breeder and owner of the colt. A heavy favorite in the Law-rence Realization, Little Current showed little during any part of the running and finished sixth in a field of seven. The race was his first attempt on grass and was regarded by Galbreath as a serious test for the Prix de l'Arc de Triomphe, the prestigious race to be run Oct. 6 in Paris. Little Current was syndicated for $4-million three weeks ago for breeding purposes. He will undertake that career at Gal-breath's Darby Dan Farm in Lexington, Ky., next year, There are strong indications that his bloodlines will enable him to develop into a good producer as a stallion

His sire, Sea-Bird, was a winner of the Epsom Derby and the Arc de Triomphe, and his dam, Luiana was a half-sister to Darby Dan's Kentucky Derby and Belmont Stakes winner Chateaugay.

Anti-Trust Suit

Decision on Kapp Case May Tell the NFL Story

By Martha Bateman

NEW YORK (NYT).—There are probably only a few players in the National Football League who have heard of United States District Judge William T. Sweigert. But within weeks, everyone connected with the sport will know his name. By that time, Judge Sweigert will have ruled on the NFL Players Association's most significant freedom issues in an anti-trust suit brought in San Francisco by Joe Kapp, the former Minnesota Viking Super Bowl quarterback. 'If Judge Sweigert decides in our favor, said Kapp's attorney, last week "the association has won the strike."

The case marks the first time that anyone has been willing to take on the NFL and stick with it. Other players have filed suits, but most have fallen by the wayside after initial skirmishes with the league's powerful legal guns.

The Kapp case began two years ago. Kapp had been playing for the Boston (now New England) Patriots until he was blackballed by the NFL because he refused to sign a standard players contract, which includes the option clause, the so-called Rozelle Rule and the reserve clause. These provisions make it impossible for a player to have any say in his career, and he has no recourse if he disagrees with the decisions made for him. Most players sign a standard contract blindly because they have no choice.

Because the Players Association is not directly involved in Kapp's suit, it has been forgotten by most of the sports media during the hectic weeks of the strike and "cooling-off period." But the San Francisco court action was obviously an important factor in the owners' decision not to negotiate demands to eliminate the reserve clause and the Rozelle Rule. Why give in at the bargaining table when there's a chance to win in the courtroom?

A Switch From the Rich

"Most players don't realize that the existence of the Kapp case made it almost impossible to negotiate the freedom issues," said the Dallas quarterback, Roger Staubach. "I have felt all along that Federal Court is where these things should be decided."

"This is the first time I've ever argued for the plaintiff in an antitrust action," said Moses Lasky of San Francisco, Kapp's lawyer. "I usually represent the rich, not the underdog. But Joe is a down-trodden, awfully decent guy. If any of my big clients had told me they were doing some of the things the NFL has done, I'd had fallen off my chair."

The flery Kapp is living in the San Francisco area, where he tries make a living as an actor. His latest credits include a Marcus Welby television episode and a new Burt Reynolds movie. "He has just as much spiritual guts as physical courage," said a friend. "When the pressure from the league got tough, he told me, I'm a man first and then a quarterback."

There are rumors that the league has offered Kapp between $2million and $3-million to drop his suit. But Lasky insists no proposal has ever been made. In any case, it is probably better for Kapp wait because a decision in his favor could result in a multimillion-dollar settlement.

The NFL has already spent a lot of money on the Kapp case. One source estimates that it will dole out close to $1-million in legal fees before everything is over.

Hamilton Carothers, a dedicated Washington Redskin fan, is now spending most of his time representing the NFL in anti-trust litigation. "There are so many cases pending," he says, "that at times when I file a paper in court I can't remember what suit I'm Carothers's approach is to represent the league as a big corporation. Just a week ago, he maintained during the Kapp trial on the West Coast that the freedom issues should be settled in collective bargaining. Meanwhile, on the East Coast, the owners were refusing to discuss these same issues with the players. That is the NFL's idea negotiation In the Kapp suit, Judge Sweigert has been asked to decide the legality of the draft, the option clause, tampering rules, the Rozelie Rule and the standard players contract, which embodies the reserve clause. (The Rozelle Rule requires that Team B compensate Team A when a player from Team A plays out his option year and joins

A source close to the case said, "The judge understands the topicality of these issues, and a ruling will come shortly, probably before Sept. 15. An overthrow of the NFL's long-accepted dictatorial rules has broad support among players, not just the young, the radical and the black. Lee Roy Jordan, a Dallas linebacker, is an 11-year veteran who is sometimes teased by his teammates for being a Goldwater Republican. But Jordan knows what's at stake in the Kapp case. "This is a big one," he said, "I hope it will help us in our fight which is so ridiculously weighted in favor of the owners."

"That's right," agreed a Redskin safety, Rosey Taylor.

favorable decision will mean we're getting a little closer to having some justice in this league."

Redskins Forgive Thomas

WASHINGTON, Sept. 3 (UPI). -Talented but troublesome Duane Thomas, put on waivers by the Washington Redskins last week after he threatened a coach, was reinstated to the team today by coach George Allen.

Allen had recalled the waivers on Thomas last Thursday after the running back apologized for incident involving backfield coach Charlie Waller. Allen said he made today's decision because of Thomas's value to the team. "My first consideration was for the team." said Allen. "Duane can help us win now. He has made so much progress I want to give him a second chance. Allen said that Waller, shoved into a wall, threatened and ac-

Cats, Sons, Dogs, Girls

By Russell Baker

WASHINGTON.—President too humbled by the experience Ford is a cat man and has sons. These facts have been overlooked by the political analysts. although nothing else we know about him tells more precisely what a radical departure he is from the main line of modern presidents.

The modern style in presidents has run to daughters and does. and while there is nothing wrong with daughters or dogs it is nevertheless, a fect that daughtersand-dogs men perceive the world quite differently from cats-and-

We are dealing with what the Nixon people called "input." The input of daughters and dogs is loyalty and affection. Sons and cats. on the other hand, surround a man with real-Without being dogmatic and-cats president is better off than a daughters-and-dog president, simply because of the nature of the presidency.

As president, a man automatically acquires more loyalty and affection than is good for him. The added bonus from dogs and daughters merely gives him an excess of riches. The reality introduced into his life by cats and sons is likelier to give him a more balanced view of life, for every-thing else about the presidency conspires to insulate the great man from reality.

It is arguable, for example, that we might have been spared the worst of the Vietnam adventure if any of our previous three presidents had had growing sons in the White House. Instead, we had a run of presidents with loval affectionate daughters.

Richard Nixon with two daughters. Lyndon Johnson with two, John Kennedy with one. Kennedy also had a baby son, of course, but he was not of an ace to inform his father how the people he went around with felt about making war in Asia.

There is material here for pop psychologists. Do presidents without sons have to be warlike to establish their machismo? Do politicians who have sons become

AMERICA CALLING

MESSAGES, SEPT. 4

those middle-aged defeats at Indian wrestling, those failures to stamp the paternal character on its rightful heir-to pursue the presidency with sufficient zest? ·

Dogs, of course, are as firmly entrenched in political life as the campaign pledge. Famous political dogs of the modern era include Roosevelt's Fala, those beagles Lyndon Johnson picked up by the ears. Nixon's Checkers (deceased before his presidency) and King Timahoe.

2 S E

The problem with dogs, if you are president, is that dogs don't criticize. Dogs are always agreeing with you, which is precisely what presidents do not require. They already have too many nersons agreeing with them, and the motives of these persons are similar to the motives of the dogs. Dogs, like politicians, realize that a dog that disagrees with his boss doesn't stay around very long.

Himans expect dogs to agree with them. This is why so many people keep dogs. Dogs are fa-mous for agreeability, and most of us are desperate most of the time in our need to be agreed with. So we acquire dogs, and the dogs sit around with their tongues out pretending to smile and showing us in every possible way what splendid people we are. Cats will not do this. Cats have too much dignity. When a man does something foolish, no cat will hang his tongue out in a loving smile and tell the man he is a splendid fellow. The cat simply looks at the man with contempt, demands to be fed. then tells the man to get out of the armchair because he, the cat, wants to lie down there, and goes to sleep. Cats, in fact, behave this way even when a man does something noble. A man who keeps a cat is constantly reminded that gratitude is short-lived that the important things in life are regular meals periodic bouts of love, and that in the end, no matter how well things seem to be going, there will always be cat hairs on your blue suit.

A president willing to subject himself to this kind of wisdom is preferable to one who prefers constantly being agreed with by Ford may weather very

Soviet Union: A Country of Curious Cures

By Robert C. Toth

MOSCOW-A small item in a Soviet magazine reported that the new sanatorium features a swimming pool and hot sulfur baths and produces "over 3,000 liters of kumiss annually, enough to give a course of treatment to 300 patients."

What is kumiss? asked a foreigner. "Mare's milk." explained a Russian, "very good for weak hmgs."

Leningrad foundry workers are benefiting greatly from breathing an oxygenenriched atmosphere, according to that city's Prayda a few days ago. As if to convince doubters of the efficacy of the treatment, it added that a half hour of the oxygen "is equivalent to six months in a Pine forest air? "Very healthy," said an educated Russian. woman. "The pine air kills all the germs." One does not have to live long in the Soviet Union to discover that it is a country of curious cures.

In Yalta

Down in Yalta, for example, the official guidebook recommends helio and zero-therapy, or sun and air cures, which seems to be just sunbathing and breathing.

The Crimea, with its great vineyards, features grape therapy. Whether taken naturally or as the fermented juice of the grape is unknown.

Out in the Soviet Far East is the mysterious ginseng root that grows wild in the Siberian "talga" or tundra. A recent article in Soviet Life called it the "king of pharmacology" and the "root of a hundred strengths," although no one knows precisely what it does.

The Russians recently began cultivating small amounts of genseng near Moscow and pickle it in 90 per cent alcohol. "Very popular," said the Russian woman. "You can barely find it at the druggists' any-

Russians brew "tex" cut of an extraordinary number of herbs and roots found in their forests. These materials are lumped together as so called "travy" or "grasses." A kind of folk medicine underground has existed here for centuries around these products which can be bought on the street

Officials Frown Soviet authorities frown on this freelance medicine but every drugstore has a section where much the same grass, is sold. A typical drugstore has dozens of small cardboard cartons of grass costing

20 to 50 cents each and each with the

Another box had grass for "settling the nervous system," another for "proper working of the intestines," yet another for menstrual disorders. These treatments are neither demonstrably good or bad, according to Western doctors here.

Kumiss, for example, is a "rich, highly nutritional dripk widely used by Russians for ages to treat tuberculosis," according to Dr. David Woodhead of the British Embassy. Tolstoy, a famous hypochondriac, was very big on kumiss, "but there is no evidence that kumiss has anything of value against tuberculosis," Dr. Woodhead said.

Similarly, there is no proof that air in pine forests has anything but a nice smell. In fact, according to Dr. David Willett, the U.S Embassy physician, "there once was a theory in the West that pine pollen caused sarcoidesis, a lung ailment that mimics tuberculosis in some_ways."

Soviet authorities come down hard against treatments that smack of occultism, astrology, and faith healing. Each week finds at least one article blistering "overcredulous people" who are duped by outright quacks.

But the press is equivocal about "cures" that fall between quackery and folk medicine. In a single week here there can be articles both attacking and defending practices like yoga, acupuncture and homeopathy.

"Why is aspirin considered scientific but not tea with raspberries?" asked a recent article in the Literary Gasette. "Why is streptocide better than homeopathic balls or the yoga hon pose? Why is yoga frowned on but not running in place?

Prof. F. Romashov, interviewed in that article, said that about 40 per cent of all medicines produced in the Soviet Union come from raw vegetable matter. In fact, the percentage may actually be higher.

The overwhelming number of anti-cancer drugs which Soviet scientists have sent to the United States for clinical testing under the current exchange program are derived from natural substances, according to U.S. officials. Almost all American drugs used in chemotherapy, on the other hand, are chemically synthesized.

Valuable Drugs

Sometimes highly valuable drugs have been discovered in old folk remedie Western doctors are reluctant to dismiss herb "cures" as quackery.

The fox glove plant in England, for example, helped aged men for centuries before scientists found it contained digitalis, still widely used. And ranwolfis turned out to contain reserpine, which lowers blood pressure.

In the West, however, scientists try to identify the active ingredient in any promising herb and then synthesize it, both to increase its purity and potency and to allow exact repeated dosages. Here the pharmaceutical industry apparently does not follow this procedure.

Dr. Woodhead suspects that Soviet doctors prescribe traditional but unproven remedies largely because "they just don't have modern drugs available to them and they have to give something." He said a Russian doctor recently told him that a new pharmaceutical factory has been built here that will make the Soviet Union independent, for the first time, of East European countries like Hungary that supply certain drugs.

And U.S. business sources here say the Soviet government is currently soliciting bids from American and French firms for a complete antibiotic plant.

Pook Corner Is Up for Sale

at Poch Comer is up for salefor 2500,000 -- but you get an estate with it. The stone bridge, which crosses a tributary of the River Medway near Hartfield, England, and which appears in the Poob books written by A.A. Miline, is part of a 446-acre estate put onthe block by retired industrialist Jack Bowthorpe. ...

FALSE ARREST: The man who ran through Prague at night dressed only in his underpants and was picked up by police was not a criminal or streaker, Czech newspapers reported Tuesday. He was a "country bumpkin" who sold his clothes when the waiter in a restaurant presented him with a bill he could not pay. He set out for home in his shorts; the cold forced him to a brisk trot. Police said the man was from Nachod, some 95 miles east

Mayor Richard Daley returned to Chicago's City Hall Tuesday for the first time since suffering a mild stroke four months ago. Daley suffered the stroke May 6 and underwent surgery June 2 to clear a neck artery of fatty ances blocking the flow of blood to the brain. The mayor has been recuperating at his Grand Beach, Mich., summer home since the operation.

Peoplereader M.L. of Paris says that not only does she miss the comic strip, Rex Morgan, M.D., but that she finds Andy Capp a handicap.

John Carter Cash, 4-year-old son of entertainers Johnny Cash and June Carter, was in stable but improving condition Tuesday at Vanderbilt Hospital in Nashville after being seriously injured in a traffic accident Monday, officials reported. The elder Cash, 41 was ordered by doctors to bow out as host of a Jerry Lewis Muscular Dystrophy telethon because of exhaustion. John was one of seven persons injured when a jeep overturned, pinning him under the vehicle. No one else was seriously injured. ...

RECORDS: Jackson Armstrong of Pittsburgh—with 750 laps—is claiming the world record for marathon roller coaster rides. It took 31 hours and 441 miles. Will he ride a roller coaster again? "No," Armstrong, a disc jockey, said, "not if I can help it." In
